The Cauldron of Change

You never know what's coming for you. Change is happening all the time. Change can be scary or thrilling. How can I walk the path of change? Can I avoid the Cauldron? How can we handle the challenges of change most constructively? Understanding myself is the key to dealing with inevitable change more positively. Change is constant; suffering is optional.

David M. Aitken FRAIC — Founder and Principal, Aitken Leadership Group, Vancouver, Canada

Concluding a distinguished twenty-seven year career in architecture, David left his own firm in 1993 and founded Aitken Leadership Group, a unique consulting organization, developing groundbreaking applications of Personal Mastery for high performance creative organizations. He was made a Fellow of the Royal Architectural Institute of Canada.

A master teacher, David works throughout North America as a speaker, facilitator, educator and transformational executive coach. He has integrated deep creativity with a lifetime of study in behavioral psychology and applied philosophy.

With his son and partner Geordie Aitken, and other colleagues, he delivers an array of intensive leadership training, “The ALG Coaches College” and a range of useful leadership tools. They assist organizations and individuals in realizing their full potential.

Inspiration, humor and compassion combined with razor-sharp insight form David’s unique style of thinking, teaching and executive coaching. He is committed to “improving the quality of his life and the lives of others.”

As a keynote speaker, he was featured at AIA, PSMA and ACEC national conventions. He was a guest on the Oprah Winfrey show dedicated to the power of personal purpose.

He is a senior faculty member of the Senior Executive Institute of ACEC in Washington, D.C.

In addition to his former career as an architect, David has had experience as a military officer, musician, manufacturer and developer. His passion is hiking in the mountains with his Dobermans, Mystic and Spirit. He has four grown children and with his wife Janie, makes his home in West Vancouver, British Columbia.
